

IN THE CROWN COURT AT LEWES

Case No. T20267731

R v HOLLIS

SAMPLE BUNDLE DOCUMENT

Prepared for demonstration only

A. Introduction

1. This is a sample document used to show how Bibliolegis displays a PDF. Every name, date and figure in it is invented and none of it refers to a real case.
2. The defendant, Mr Hollis, was employed as a senior account manager between March 2019 and August 2025. The prosecution case is that he took a copy of the firm's client list on leaving and used it to approach clients on behalf of a competitor.
3. The defence case is that the contacts in question were his own personal connections, built up before his employment began, and that no confidential material was taken.

B. Background

4. On 18 August 2025 the complainant's IT team identified an export of the client relationship database made from Mr Hollis's account two days before he left. The export is exhibited as CD1.
5. Messages sent through LinkedIn between September and November 2025 are exhibited as CD2. The prosecution relies on eleven of them as showing approaches to clients named in CD1.
6. Photographs taken during the clearance of Mr Hollis's office are exhibited as scans 1 to 3. They show the desk and the contents of two drawers as found on 21 August 2025.

C. The issues

7. The issues for the jury are, first, whether the export at CD1 was made by Mr Hollis and, second, whether any of the approaches at CD2 relied on information taken from it.
8. On the first issue the court will hear from the forensic accountant, whose preliminary report deals with the audit trail of the database and the times of access.
9. On the second issue the defence will say that at least seven of the eleven contacts were connected to Mr Hollis on LinkedIn before March 2019, and that the remaining four were introduced to him at industry events.

D. Directions sought

10. The defence asks for disclosure of the full audit log of the database for the period 1 July to 31 August 2025, not only the extract served with the case papers.
11. The defence also asks for the native file of CD1 rather than the printed copy, so its metadata can be examined by the defence expert.

12. Both requests are made under the Criminal Procedure Rules, Part 15, and are said to be reasonable and proportionate given the centrality of CD1 to the prosecution case.
13. A draft order is attached.
